

Fur Display

Masahiro Furukawa

Naohisa Nagaya

The University of Electro-Communications

Takuji Tokiwa

The University of Tokyo

Masahiko Inami

Atsushi Okoshi

Maki Sugimoto

Yuta Sugiura

Yuji Uema

Keio University Graduate School
of Media Design

Fur Display makes invisible information visible. It not only delivers dynamic movements of appealing, bushy fur, but it is also a feathery, visual, tactile display that invites touch and interaction. Earlier versions of this concept often used rigid surfaces like tabletops, but Fur Display presents touchable fur with surprising dynamic movement. The device is simple and small, so it can be placed on clothing, appliances, or personal belongings, where it becomes a useful, friendly interface in our daily lives.